Facilitator. Sam Saad

In your school

- Convenient
- Local conditions

The most effective way to inservice is to do this in the same environment teachers must work in.

- No expense needed for casual teachers
- No disruption to classes

as this become part of their curriculum for that day rather than an intrusion

Hand on for teachers

- Teachers run part of the lessons

It is critical that teachers actually run part of the lesson so that by the end of the program they are ready to teach music independently

- Teachers are involved in the process

I will work collaboratively with teachers, so that the direction taken and material covered is relevant to that teacher.

- Teachers make the start they would never have made

Many teachers would like to teach music, but are reluctant to do so. This is the start they need.

Building self-sustainability

- It trains teachers who can train others
- Each participating teacher has access to supporting material : Music Books, Audio Instructional CD, Beat Music and CD Programmer
- Child's skills are transportable as they progress through the school

The skills that the children learn remain with them as they go into new classes with new teachers.

Powerful Content

- Focuses on Music Through Patterns and Games

A highly visual and kinaesthetic approach to what is often perceived as a basically auditory activity.

- Gives children a sense of ownership of work, through simple pattern making

Very simple strategies that have children creating through design and improvisation within patterns and frameworks.

- Presentable as items without extra work

Many of the activities and games can be presented 'as is' without any extra work or effort. The process can be presented as a product.

Dual Benefit allows for Flexible Funding

- Child contribution, and T&D or CAPA contribution.

1. The program provides a service that is not normally attainable for the participating children
2. T&D for the teachers involved.

Staff Meeting In-service

- Staff Inservicing focusing on sharing learning, and building capacity for on going success
